er than heretofore; at least this was stated to be a fact by an official of the league yesterday

"We have definitely resolved to increase our league to eight clubs. Of course they have not been selected yet, but I can, I think, name the eight. They will be: East End Athletics, Homestead, Braddock and Duquesnes; the four being the old league.

THE FOUR NEW CLUBS.

The new four will be the Emsworths, Sewickleys, Etna Stars and a team made up of players from the G. T. Ts. and W. J. Kuchnes. The club will take the latter name. If nothing unforeseen occurs these eight clubs will form Morris intends to organize a strong team with team may be admitted instead of some other. Hazelwood has also applied, together with one or two other clubs. The league meeting will not be held until some time next month, and I feel certain that the teams named will be selected. We have heard from them all." The question of grounds is a difficulty hard to overcome by some clubs, but great one agement is given on the matter by the fact that at the league meeting a change will be made in the constitution to meet the case. Clubs not having grounds of their own will have their bome games scheduled on the grounds of other clubs. In these home games the club claiming them as such shall have control of all the receipts, out of which they must pay for all advertising balls, etc., the "visiting" or the real home club paying for the umpire, the same as if the game was being played by the club away from its own grounds. made in the constitution to meet the case. A change of this kind, it is expected, will surmount the difficulty complained of. The clubs having grounds are: The Braddocks, Homesteads, East End Athletics, Emsworths, Etna Stars and Sewickleys. This leaves only

The East End Athletics are not sure of the The East End Athletics are not sure of the services of Ad Gumbert, the pitcher, for the season. He told a friend the other day that if he can obtain six months' leave of absence from his employment at the Prothonotary's office he will play in Chicago. If he cannot scorre leave of absence, however, he will remain here, and will pitch for the East Enders. This will give them a great advantage, and in all probability the amateur pennant. The Emsworths, however, promise to be strong, as they have two excellent pitchers who will help out the weak batting of the team. The Homesteads will be strong as ever, and altogether the league will be a good one.

It is rumored that Von der Abe is dissatisfied with the Brooklyn club's share of last year's plums, and is making a strenuous fight for an equal division of next season's fruit. VON DER AHE WANTED.

Manager Phillips Desires to Find Him Lecal Rail Gossin.

Manager Phillips is gradually regaining his strength and expects to be out enjoying the fresh air within a week or so. Yesterday after-noon he had a few words to say about baseball patters. He said: "I have not heard from Von der Ahe yet, and if I knew where to reach him I would wire him at once asking definitely what he means. I at once asking definitely what he means. I want to know whether or not he'll play, as I can make other arrangements if they won't play. I have had a letter from the Detroit club. The latter wants to come here and open the grounds for the season on April 13. If we return from our Western trip by that time Detroit's desire will be granted."

Beferring to Mr. Spalding's opinions as exclusively stated in The Disparch yesterday, Mr. Phillips said: "I think that if the Association does not adopt the League graded salary rule it will interfere greatly with the latter, as it will be sometimes difficult to buy an Association player without paying high for him."

A LATTER FROM SMITH.

The Local Sprinter Says He Was Robbed nt Sheffield.

A letter was received in the city yesterday from George Smith, the local sprinter who started in the recent Sheffield Christmas handistarted in the recent Sheffield Christmas handicap. The letter was not long but very pointed.
It was written two days after the handicap.
George says that he was absolutely robbed by the referee. He, Smith, declares that he won his heat by fully a half yard and that the referee decided against him. A scene of the wildest kind followed, as the public had backed Smith heavily. He started first favorite, his price being 7 to 2 against two days before the handicap started. Smith adds that a serious

Eina Stars and Sewickleys. This leaves only two clubs without grounds. The great benefit resulting from having an organization will probably prompt all parties concerned to act in a give-and-take spirit as much as possible. If this is so there is no fear of the league.

The league's season will open on April 20 and close on September 17. Referring to this the official already quoted said: "We will close at the time named, because the weather begins to break up about then; at any rate the attendance falls off greatly. We have, or at least we intend to have, four regular umpires and a substitute. Each umpire will be paid $2 per game. half the gross receipts, which will no doubt be good, as the walk is under the management of the Dawson Fire Company.

AMSTERDAM, January 10 .- In the skating championship contest here to-day the two-mile race was won by Joseph F. Donoghue, of Newburg, N. Y., in 6 minutes and 24 seconds. His opponent, Pauschin, the Russian champion, covered the distance in 6 minutes and 31 seconds. The best record previously made for the same distance was 6 minutes and 41 seconds. A thaw has set in and the ice is rapidly melting.

Another large batch of entries for the approaching dog show was received yesterday. Among the number were the entries of several setters entered by Fred Pastre, of this city.

He Says the Railroad Managers Should Advise Their Agents to OBEY THE INTER-STATE LAW.

All Modifications.

had the fever, but are convalescent. The Students of transportation are watching and will lie there until she has been disthe meeting of the railroad Presidents at New York. Congressmen believe that obedience to the Inter-State Commerce law on the part of the railroad managers would lead to modifications in their favor. Judge Cooley, however, does not think any relief can be obtained at this session. The pending amendments to the law, now before Congress, are recalled, and are interesting at this time.

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. WASHINGTON, January 10 .- The meeting of the railroad presidents with the members of the Inter-State Commerce Commission is attracting a good deal of attention here, particularly among those who have made the transportation problem a study. It was a matter of the mountain going to Mahomet when the commissioners went to New York, but they preferred to do so, as there was another matter over there to be looked after.

The feeling is general among Congressmen that if the railway officials would agree to obey the law strictly for a few months, so that it might be seen whether it required amendment, there would be little difficulty in making the necessary modifications. But it is claimed that the law hasn't been literally obeyed for a single month by any trunk line railroad since it went into operation, and there is, therefore, less spirit of concession than there otherwise would be. Senator Cullom expressed the prevailing sentiment to-day

NO CHANCE FOR CHANGES. "If the conference recommends changes in the inter-State commerce law, I fear that they will be disappointed. The condition of legislation in both Houses is such that it would be impossible to get anything through at this session, although it might be done if all the parties concerned agreed unnaimously and parties concerned agreed unanimously, and could show that it was absolutely necessary. Of course I should feel bound to give earnest consideration to any suggestions that may come from this conference, but it seems to me that the efforts of the gentlemen gathered in New York might best be directed toward securing an honest observance of the law by their officers and agents. I believe that it would be the most simple and effective way of curing the troubles complained of. The railroad presidents might compel their subordinates to obey the law instead of vio-lating it, for a short time at least, as an ex-

"Have you been considering any amend-ment to the anti-pooling section?"

"I have been intending to take up the subject, and if agreeable to my colleagues on the committee, call together some of the best representatives of the several interests—the railroad managers, the stock-holders and the shippers—to get their judgment as to what improvement might be made in the law, but I have been prevented from so doing because the tariff bill has absorbed all the time and attention of the other members of the committee, as well as my own. And I have hoped, too, that the commission would institute such an inquiry to ascertain what is necessary to be done, and recommend it to Congress. A HOPEFUL SIGN. "I think one of the most hopeful signs of the times is that the representatives of the stockholders are becoming interested in the subject, and are beginning to express their views to managers of their property. I infer, too, that the Presidents and managers are beginning to realize that there is a law regulating inter-State com-merce, and I hope they will conclude that it ought to be obeyed, so as to enable the law-makers of this country to ascertain what its defects are and intelligently correct them.

There were several amendments to the inter-State bill made at the last session of Congress, which still lie in the hands of a of the Senate to agree to the amendments made by the House. It amends the existing law by requiring the railway companies to give public notice for ten days in advance of the reduction of any rate, just as they are now required to give notice of any increase in rates, which is intended to give stability to the tariff schedules and retard the present tendency to rate wars. The penalty for

VIOLATIONS OF THE LAW increased so as to include imprisonmen as well as fine. The practice known as underbilling is made a criminal offense, and the shipper who deceives the carrier as to the character or value of his goods, or endeavors to secure a lower rate than he is entitled to by underbilling his freight, is ounished by imprisonment as well as fine. The section of the present law which authorizes the commission to assess damiges was drawn by Senator Edmunds, and received the sanction of the most eminent lawyers of the Senate, but it has nevertheless been declared unconstitutional by Judge

Cooley, and hasn't been enforced for that reason. The pending bill modifies it to meet Judge Cooley's views. The Standard Oil amendment, as it is called, which was attached to the bill at the nstigation of Mr. Rice, of Marietta, who has been fighting that company for several years, is also objected to by the Senators because it is in the nature of special legislation, and they do not see why they should make a law for the transportation of oil any more than for the transportation of dressed beef, or grain, or coal.

for her, and as she didn't come, thought she had gone to visit some friends. Later she learned of the accident, and was about to rush off to the scene of the disaster, when she was met at the door by people bearing her daughter, the upper part of whose body was crushed black from congestion and smeared with blood and mortar dust. The screams of the mother at this gruesome sight aroused the whole neighborhood. She was carried to her bed, where she remains, ut terly prostrated by the terrible shock. An instance somewhat the opposite of this is that of Enoch Saylor, who thought he recognized a body taken out from the ruins as that of one his daughters, and had t taken home in one of the patrol wagons.

When he came to his house and was about to have the body carried in, he was met at the door by both of his daughters, who were alive and well. David Nester, of New Ringgold, Schuylkill county, whose daughter was employed in the mill, hearing of the accident, came down to look after her. He had hardly arrived at the place when his daughter, who was the last victim recovered, was carried

Nothing could be more significant to the extremity of the anguish of some of the poor bereaved creatures who had lost their loved ones by the disaster than the frenzied exclamation of a woman who walked up and down among the crowds last night, with clenched hands, exclaiming aloud in a mixture grief and wrath:

During the day many people began to carry away pieces of machinery and bales of raw silk, which were scattered among the ruins, in order to prevent as well as interfere with the work of search.

The Reading artillery were called to the aid of the police, and formed a cordon around the ruins, forbidding anyone to pass. They are guarding the ruins to-night. The Complicated Apparatus Used by the Tollers of the Sen.

From the helmet projects a coil of snakelike rubber hose, a sort of antenna, which passes down under his left arm and up through the water, connecting with an air pump on a float-stage or in a boat, the pump manipulated by two men, and furnishes compressed air for breathing when under water, which exhausts into the water by a valve in the helmet, enabling him to breathe continually fresh air, while when he comes to the surface the windows of his helmet can be opened and he can breathe without the assistance of the air pump. When he goes down into the water he has two means of communicating with those above, the hose and the life line. By the latter he also descends and comes up when necessary. By each of these he gives and receives signals mutually understood, three sharp pulls on the life line indicating that he is ready to ascend. In order to overcome the natural buoyancy of his body and make its specific gravity such that he can readily walk about on the bottom of the sea he wears shoes with soles heavily ballasted or weighted with lead.

The upper part of his body is protected, as is also his lower half, by heavy canvas covering, consisting of jacket with sleeves and pantaloons with terminations which fit closely with elastic bands clinging to his flesh, the jacket fitted closely to the helmet with metallic bands bolted together, with a rubber gasket, between. No water or air can get to him, except the latter by the hose, "There is no God. A good and wise God unless he opens the glass window of his helmet, which he is not likely to do unless occasion requires. Additional weight is placed at his chest and back; sometimes a breast-plate and a shoulder-plate of lead, sometimes a belt heavily weighted which can be thrown on or off the shoulders and hang down in front and behind when in

BISMARCK AND MORIER.

The Affair Still Causing Considerable Trou ble and Talk in Europe. BERLIN, January 10 .- There is a wellfounded report that Prince Bismarck will touch upon the Morier and Geffeken inci-dents during the coming debate on East African matters.

The Deutsche Wochenblatt, a free Conservative, declares that Prince Bismarck's report on the Geffeken affair resulted in his defeat, and that the Morier incident is a still uglier echo of the diary affair. Things have gone so far, it says, that the continuance of Merier at St. Petersburg will be a severe blow to German diplomacy and diffi-

THE ANDOVER HERESY.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts May Compel Seelye to Talk. ANDOVER, January 10. - Ex-Governor George D. Robinson, sitting as Commissioner for the Supreme Court, resumed today the hearing in the famous heresy case in Prof. Smyth's appeal against the decision confirming his removal by the Board of Visitors of the Andover Seminary from his chair in that institution. Several witnesses were examined as to the various steps that led to the noted ecclesiastical trial and the persons most active in the movement against Prof. Smyth and the other professors accused of teaching a new theology—namely, the possibility of probation after death and the fallibility of the Bible. The most interesting point in the hearing was Commissioner Robinson's decision to report to the Supreme Court the refusal on Friday last of President Seelye, of Amherst College, to answer certain questions, with a view to ascertaining if he can be compelled to answer. The hearing was adjourned, pending the answer of the Supreme Court.
